ONLY A FAKE.

NO MAN HYPNOTIZED OVER
THE LONG DISTANCE
TELEPHONE.

The story going the rounds of the press about a man in Paducah named Edward Williamson having been hypnotized over the long distance telephone by Dr. Laura Belle Coleman, a woman in Chicago, is a fake pure and simple. Something of the kind was attempted here about three weeks ago, but none of the doctors could be induced to take any stock in it and it was with difficulty that one doctor
could be persuaded to go to the place where the "hypnotism" was to take place. He says the whole proceeding was a fake. The Dr. Cook mentioned is the doctor's office boy and the Dr.
Young a young man studying medicine under Dr. Frank Boyd. No hat pin was stuck through the subject's arm, but through his coat sleeve.

FORMER PADUCAHAN

MR. CHARLES J. MORTON DIES
AT IRONTON, OHIO.

He Lived In Paducah For Many Years—
Recently Retired From Business.

FROM TUESDAY'S DAILY

Mr. Charles J. Morton, formerly a citizen of Paducah, and in business at Fourth and Broadway, died yesterday at his home at Ironton, Ohio, from heart trouble, after an illness of several months. The news of his death was received by relatives in the city last night.

Mr. Morton was at one time one of Paducah's best known and most popular merchants, but some years ago
sold out his business to L. H. Ogilvie & Co., and went to South Pittsburg and to Nashville, where he was in the furniture and carpet business. He lived subsequently at Auburn, Ky., where he last summer retired from business and later went to his wife's former home to reside.
His health had been failing for some time and death was not unexpected.

The deceased was 61 years old and was born in Logan county, Ky. For many years he was a citizen of Paducah,
having come here when a boy,
and serving in the Confederate regiment from here. He was a gentleman of wide popularity and deep integrity, and the news of his death will be received here with general regret among those who knew him.

He leaves a wife and two children.
The funeral will take place at Ironton.

official number of paid admissions was 24,483. Mr. J. Crit Jones was second, guessing 24,500, and Mr. E.

THE BUDGET

Tonight the Tax Levy Ordinance
Will be Given First Passage.

RATE, $1.45 ON THE $100

This Year There Will be Increases in Several of the Appropriations for Maintaining the City.

COUNCIL MEETS IN CALLED SESSION

FROM WEDNESDAY'S SUN

The tax levy ordinance will come up this evening at a called meeting of the city council for first passage. Mayor Lang, who has just returned after a week's absence, is today drawing up the ordinance.

The amount necessary to run the city during the next fiscal year, approximately, is $112,000, about the same as last year. The schools will require a levy of forty-five cents, leaving one dollar for city purposes. There have been increases in many of the appropriations and the fact that the total amount required is practically the same as last year, is due to the fact that last year $18,000 was appropriated for storm water sewerage and brick streets, and this year no such appropriation is made.

The budget will be about as follows, only the larger amounts being given:

Fire department about $30,000, including $10,000 for new apparatus.
Interest account $9,600.
Streets, new and repairs, $15,000.
Water rents, for fire plugs, $9,000.
Hospital, pauper and charities,
$3,500.

Court costs, $10,000. This item anticipates a possible judgment in the suit of Porteous and Patterson against the city on the brick street, and the judgment now in the court of appeals of Mr. Richard Allen for $3,800, rendered in circuit court on account of the location of the post house.

Home of the Friends $340.
Bridges and Culverts $6,000.
Post house $100.
Special police officers $200.
City assessor $1100.
Tax collector $1,600.
Sanitary $1,000.
Real estate purchases, $2,500.
Celebrations, $500.
Police department $14,000.
City prison $2,500.
Light plant including new machinery, $8,000.

Salaries $7,000.
Oak Grove $1,300.
Sewerage $500.
Schools $32,000.

The tax rate will be fixed at $1.45 on the hundred dollars, one dollar for city purposes, and forty-five cents for school purposes. This is five cents less than last year.

BUSTER SLAYDEN. NOTORIOUS MAYFIELD NEGRO. ARRESTED NEAR WATER VALLEY.

FROM TUESDAY'S DAILY

Buster Slayden, a notorious negro character of Mayfield and vicinity, has at last been arrested for an offense that will probably send him over the road.

He has been in more trouble in the past few years than perhaps any other criminal character in this end of the state. He has been in many fights where pistols were used and has been shot through and through twice while resisting arrest. When tried he always managed to get out of the case
without a sentence, and in one case,
when he was being tried for resisting an officer, it is said that he scared
all the witnesses away.

He robbed a boy last Saturday near Water Valley school house, near Fulton, and the citizens of Mayfield turned out in a body and captured the man. They brought him in tied securely with ropes and landed him in the Mayfield jail where he will stay until tried.

SURPRISE MARRIAGE

MR. LEE RHODES AND MISS
JOSEPHINE RUPERTUS

Marry in Evansville—They Arrive in Paducah
and Are Stopping With the Bride's Sister.

Mr. J. Lee Rhodes, the well known first clerk on the steamer Joe Fowler and Miss Josephine Rupertus, of Elizabeth street, were married at the residence of Mr. Edward Miller, Jr., of Wabash avenue and Virginia street,
Evansville, Ind., yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock by Rev. T. Steele, of Sullivan, Ind. The marriage was a private affair, only a few of the couple's most intimate friends being present.

Miss Rupertus had been visiting in Evansville for the past three months and when the marriage took place nobody suspected that anything was going on otherwise than an every day call. The marriage was kept a secret with the view of surprising their friends, and not even the young lady's mother was informed of the marriage until this afternoon.

Mr. Rhodes is originally from Memphis, Tenn., but had been running on the river for the past 12 years. He is one of the best known and most popular young men on the river, and has many friends in Paducah.

Miss Rupertus is the daughter of the late G. L. Rupertus and is one of Paducah's most attractive young ladies.

The marriage, as intended, will come as a great surprise to their many friends who will wish them
all the success in life possible.
Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes arrived in the city on the Fowler this morning and are at present staying at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. Lucien Durrett, of North Seventh street.
They will engage rooms in the city
and make Paducah their future home.

MAYOR RETURNS

He Was in the Big Parade at Buffalo Last Monday Morning.

REPRESENTED KENTUCKY

He is Well Pleased With the Fire Apparatus the City Will Soon Add to Its Equipment.

WELL PLEASED WITH YANKEELAND

Mayor Lang returned this morning from his trip east, well pleased with the tour. He left Monday a week ago and got in at 4 o'clock this morning.

The most unusual as well as enjoyable feature of his journey was his appearance at Buffalo in the parade, with Vice President Roosevelt and Senator Mark Hanna. Mayor Lang
was sought out at his hotel and given the following card:

"A carriage for the Dedication Day parade will be assigned to you upon the presentation of this ticket at the Easterly, Franklin street, entrance of the city and county hall, Buffalo, May 20th, 1901. You are requested to arrive at the city hall not later than 9:15 a. m., as there necessarily will be some time consumed in locating your carriage."

"The parade will move promptly
at 9:45 a. m."

"Signed, Louis L. Babcock, Marshal."

Mayor Lang was much pleased with the attention shown him, and was the only representative of Kentucky in line.

The fire apparatus he inspected in Providence, R. I., was satisfactory in every respect and will give Paducah a perfect equipment. He brought pictures of the truck and ladder
home with him.

"I find," he said to a reporter,
"that Paducah is as well equipped now
as many cities, and when she gets the new truck and aerial ladder will be outclassed by none. In the larger cities engines necessarily have to be used on account of the diminution of pressure resulting from the long distances from the standpipes. This gives a city the size of Paducah a great advantage in the matter of protection over many of the larger cities."

"I saw many pretty streets, but none were more attractive than Broadway from First to Fifth. I saw none of the deep, unsightly gutters, like we have, however, as most of the cities are rolling, and very little artificial drainage is necessary, while Paducah's
being so level makes the gutters
necessary here."

The mayor spent one day in Louisville on his way east, and there saw
the working of the aerial ladder,
which can be manipulated by two men.

His trip from first to last was most enjoyable.

Mayor Lang's partner in Buffalo
was Dr. P. Uhl, of Ottumwa, Kan., superintendent of the state insane asylum, who represented Kansas.
The mayor was much impressed with Vice President Roosevelt, whom he described as one of the most attractive, athletic looking men he ever saw, and a man who was evidently very popular, as he was given an ovation wherever he went.

General Chaffee's Old Names.

General Chaffee, or maybe
he doesn't, in the queer names of Adna Romana. There is a great deal of speculation as to how he came by romantic cognomens. His people were plain, unromantic farmers in central Ohio, people not usually given to searching for absurd names for their children. However, General Chaffee is so good a soldier that it doesn't make much difference what his front names are.

Ottoman Empire Administration.

Ghazi Mukhtar Pasha, Ottoman High Commissioner in Egypt, has made a report to the Porte calling its attention to serious evils in the internal administration of the Ottoman empire and urging various reforms, including liberty of the press, appointment to offices by merit, the creation of a council of notables with control of the finances, independent tribunals,
and the abolition of the palace veto on the decisions of the council of ministers.

Very Old Tortoise.

His tortoise, each weighing from 400
to 450 pounds, and said to be about 250 years old, were recently shipped to Walter Rothschild, M. P., for his private zoological garden in London.
They were captured in the Albermarle islands, South sea. Mr. Rothschild now owns slightly four tortoises of various ages and sizes. He has been collecting them for years from all over the globe. En route the tortoises received a whole cabbage a day for food.

Found His Double.

Councilman Charles A. Smith of Logansport received a letter evidently intended for some other person of the same name. The stranger was found at the Barnett hotel and proved to be a traveling man from Syracuse, N. Y.
It developed that the two were born in the same town on the same day and that they bore a close personal resemblance to one another.

Grassroots Against Profanity.

The Washington police are conducting a crusade against profanity. Two men who had been caught were arraigned in the police court recently.
One was fined and the other released
on the ground that he yielded to temptation because of the hot weather. In cold weather, he said, he was a total
abstainer from profanity.

Told Lives Like a Peasant.

Although Count Leo Tolstol is a
rich man he still insists on living like a peasant. He has often expressed a desire to give away his fortune, and
several of his nine children agree with him, but the Russian law will not permit it without his family's consent.

Tall Man Too Light.

They are mighty particular at West
Point and they do some queer things
to candidates for admission. One ap-

the Illinois national guard was rejected the other day because he was too light. He was 6 feet 4 inches in his

Indiana Quarantine Law.

The quarantine law of Indiana provides that in the case of foreign corporations or non-residents, or of persons seeking to leave the state, or to remove their property from it, or to conceal themselves so that a summons
would not reach them, the disputed money or notes may be garnished.

Conan Doyle's Critique.

Conan Doyle has rather an original
taste in the matter of critics. "I want
a boy critic," says he; "the boy who
will start a story, and then chuck it
down and say 'rot,' or who will read
a book straight through and say 'rippling.' The person I want to criticize my work."

German Cavalry Regiments.

Every German cavalry regiment is boats bound together form a raft capable of bearing from twenty-five to twenty-seven hundred weight.

LOVE WAS VICTOR

BY UNCLE HENRY.

The steadfast friendship of John Edson and Fred Jones was the occasion of frequent remark among the friends who knew them. But many years of their lives were spent together and their devotion was natural.

Edson was a down easter, of a quiet disposition and steady habits, while Jones was from the sunny south, jovial to a fault and prone to frivolity. They were as unlike in appearance as in disposition, and this added no little to the interest of their friendship. They never offered a solution, and perhaps none was possible.

Five years before the incident in their lives here mentioned, Edson and Jones had become residents of a western metropolis and were doing work on a morning paper. As they were wont to do their sought quiet quarters and this threw them into a household where the life and light was a daughter of many charms, the greatest of these being her bright mind and lovely disposition. The two men were not slow to become admirers of this young woman, but Lillie Burnett was as slow as they were to discover the fact. But it was natural, after all, for the young men seemed wedded to their profession and Miss Burnett was just out of her teens and recognized herself as her mother's only support.

Soon, however, the friends found Miss Burnett a topic of much interest to both and frequently the object of attentions susceptible of meaning, while she was free to show both and each that she was glad when their homo hours were on, that she was ever all attention when Edson had an incident of his reading to relate, a new book to discuss, though her happiness seemed complete when Jones chatted of more commonplace things—the frivolities of the day, even unto the costumes of the tender sea.

Though such a thing as being in love with Miss Burnett never apparently entered the head of either Edson or Jones, each often thought the other had won and rejoiced without any pang of jealousy, so strong was their friendship. It was not strange, therefore, when each began to make excuses to give the other evenings alone with Miss Burnett and each in turn planned many ways to accomplish this favor, into which both fell easy victims through a mistaken idea as to what they were really doing.

Thus passed matters for some months, the men silently admiring Miss Burnett, until one day Edson, who had persuaded himself he was in his friend's way, concocted a scheme to be called home and hastily departed, but not until after he had told Miss Burnett of a hope he had—that some day Jones would propose to her and be accepted. Edson realized that he was selling his own bachelorhood and wounding his own heart as well, but his friend was first in his thoughts and he made the sacrifice so calmly and diplomatically that he won a promise for Jones ere Miss Burnett could say nay even by gesture, act or word.

Then came the busy season, and before Miss Burnett seemed to realize the fact Edson had told her good-by and was soon gone.

Alone, Miss Burnett's mind was flooded with thoughts. There was a tagging at her heart she could not understand. The idea of love had not possessed her. Edson was to her an ideal gentleman, but his ways were so settled that he appeared oddly. He had won her esteem, she knew, but she had given no serious thought to his attentions. But his absence—his departure—bore heavily upon her and her heart felt as if it would cease beating and tears would come unbidden to her eyes. But did she not have Jones, with his hearty laugh and cheery voice and attractive manners, and had not Edson said he was after her heart and was a noble boy to love, and had not he asked her to encourage him and make him happy for his sake as well as Jones? But it was several hours before she was herself again—before she had arisen from the cozy nook into which she had sunk after Edson had left her. Anyone could have recognized a change had come into her life—her dreams were most seriously changed, and seemingly many days had been added to her life. A thousand thoughts had been scurrying through her mind and she had lived then through, and was now enjoying a calm after a storm.

A new life had been born for Miss Burnett. She had not claimed it, but she knew this she would have to do, for she had well reached the years of discretion and recognized what it all meant. When she arose she lifted up her burden and a new hope. The care of the house had long been the daughter's duty, so unconsciously she passed from portal to portal to see that all was proper. In performing this duty she was surprised to note that a light was hurrying brightly in the room which Edson and Jones occupied, and she went in to lower the same. She was impressed with the idea that the room bore evidence of a hasty departure, and in looking about she spied an unfolded letter lying on the table, beside the lamp, on which the ink was not yet dry. Unwittingly she glanced at the writing and discovered that it had been penned by Edson, and this same glance convinced her it had many references as to her, for her name appeared in plain view in many places. Her impulse was to lift up the letter and read it, but honor restrained her, so, closing her eyes, she dimmed the light and turned and walked away. But there was a new revelation in her heart, a new hope in her soul, and she recognized a sacrifice had been made by one who had misjudged her heart because she herself had not known it, until this night. Again there was a flood of thought to disturb Miss Burnett's mind and it was hours before it had spent itself—in fact, the wee' sma' hours were growing longer rapidly when it was over. But she had found the peace sought, had looked into her own heart and read it aright, and had decided upon what was her duty.

Jones had just returned home after his night's work and was letting himself into the house, when the usual light in Mrs. Burnett's room went out, but he gave the matter no thought then, though he did later—when he found and had read and reread the letter left for him by Edson. An hour later, after giving the matter much consideration, Jones said aloud, starting himself in doing so: "That light, this letter. There has been a mistake made and I shall right it. Edson is in love with Miss Burnett, and she reciprocates that love. He has in his fondness for me put me in his place, like a foolish fellow. If there is a sacrifice to be made it shall be mine, not Edson's and Miss Burnett's."

Jones found it difficult to address Miss Burnett the next day. She seemed disposed to avoid him somewhat and was clearly not her old self. He was, therefore, more than satisfied as to his conclusions, but he could think of no way to help him elude the matter, but he decided to let the opportunity come, as he was sure it would come, and this was the result. The evening when it was thought Edson should signify his intention to start on his return trip, Jones casually remarked that he feared he was seriously thinking of remaining down east. It was a remark he had no authority for making, other than the fact that Edson had not said a word about returning at all, but it was purposely made, for Jones was alone with Miss Burnett and she was so seated that he could watch her face and detect any effect it might make. The words could not have been more effective, and Jones' conscience smote him, but he was new thoroughly satisfied. He knew that he had lost the treasure that Edson would have given to him at the sacrifice of his heart, but he only aimed to make those he loved happier in a realization of their love for each other in some way to him not then clear.

That night another letter was written beneath that same lamp. But this one was not left unfolded on the table. It was instead folded, enveloped in envelope, addressed and pocketed for mailing the next day. This letter was to John Edson, Esq., Hampton, N. H., and told a plain story of observation and knowledge. It went its way and soon brought an answer. The reply came in a telegram and was briefly:

"Your letter lightens a double burden. Am coming to claim what seems mine through this favor."

The evening of the reception of the dispatch Jones dropped it on a table in front of Miss Burnett and turned away. Half an hour later he had returned and saw in her face a full understanding of the meaning he had wished to leave. That understanding was the assurance that if there was to be any sacrifice made Jones would have to make it and not Edson, and that one and not three would suffer. There was relief to Miss Burnett when she looked into Jones' face and saw an acceptance of the conditions and the smile she gave him was most comforting.

"I shall take my trip home when Edson gets back," said Jones, as if it was all understood.

"But you will not stay long," as calmly remarked Miss Burnett.

"Ah, no," was Jones' reply. And then he coolly answered: "I shall be back in time to attend the wedding. You know I must bless you both, which I shall do with all my heart."

The first born of John Edson and wife was just old enough to recognize his name of Jones Edson when Jones declared to the proud parents that he couldn't longer withstand their good example and would soon wed. It was a declaration not expected, for his devotion to a young lady of the neighborhood was known to Mrs. Edson, but there was much in her reply when she said: "You have our best wishes and I congratulate you on your choice."

General Chaffee, who is

speculation as to how he came by ro-

plain, unromantic farmers in central

now owns eighty-four tortoises of var-

It developed that the two were born in

that they bore a close personal re-

Crusade Against Profanity.
The Washington police are conducting a crusade against profanity. Two men who had been caught recently reigned in the police court were arrested on the ground that they yielded to tem-pation because of the hot weather. In

Told Lives Like a Peasant.
Although Count Leo Tolstol is a
rich man he still insists on living like
a peasant. He has often expressed a desire to give away his fortune, and
several of his nine children agree with
him, but the Russian law will not permit it without his family's consent.

Tail Men Too Tight.
They are mighty particular at West
Point and they do some queer things
to candidates for admission. One applicant who said he was a lieutenant in the Illinois national guard was rejected the other day because he was too tight. He was 6 feet 4 inches in his stocking feet.

conceal themselves so that a summons
would not reach them, the dispensed

Conan Doyle's Critique.
Conan Doyle has rather an original
taste in the matter of critics. "I want
a boy critic," says he; "the boy who
will start a story, and then chuck it
down and say 'rot,' or who will read
a book straight through and say 'ripping.' That's the person I want to criticize my work."

boats bound together form a raft capa-

There are to be no typewriters in Turkey. The custom authorities have prohibited their importation, because they "all write alike." In Turkey there must be some distinctive feature of all writing, so no typewriters are admitted. This does not apply to the female typewriter so popular in America.

A delegation of prominent citizens of Columbia, Tenn., have gone to Washington, to protest against the removal of the statue at that place. As several similar protests have been ignored, however, it is more than probable that this one also will be. It is the general opinion, however, that the government will make Columbia an army post.

The senior of the European press is in commendation of the course pursued by America in China, and few of the representative papers of the continent see any reason why any indignant at all is demanded of the Chinese, other than the actual damages to person or property. All the nations seem to regret that they cannot withdraw from China as gracefully as the United States did.

The Kentucky editors are to take the most extensive trip in their history this summer. They meet in Madisonville and after a two days' session leave for the west on August 2. The tour includes Kansas City, Denver, Pueblo, Cripple Creek, Colorado Springs, Manitou, the Royal George, Grand Junction and other places. The trip will embrace 3,500 miles, and will require from August 21 to the 11th. The railroads have extended the usual courtesies, and will offer the party every accommodation that could be desired.

It is only four million dollars that Patillo Higgins wants Capt. Lucas to pay him. Patillo has filed suit at Beaumont, Texas, against Capt. Lucas, who discovered the oil belt resulting in so many fortunes being made. He alleges that he gave Capt. Lucas the first information that he received, and induced him to bore the first well. As a result of this gratuitous knowledge, Patillo thinks he is entitled first to $40,000 for the prescience itself, next to one tenth interest in the output of petroleum, which is about $25,000 worth of oil a day, and last, but not least, for damages, the total amounting to $4,000,000. This will make Patillo quite a rich man when he gets it.

The St. Louis Republic seems to be between the devil and the deep blue sea. It is for Mr. Rello Wells, mayor elect of St. Louis, and for Mr. W. J. Bryan, the hot air disturbance of Nebraska. It does not know which to cut loose from, and yet knows that on account of the open enmity between Mr. Wells and Mr. Bryan, and their respective followers, it must cut loose from one. Mr. Wells has just made himself the object of much criticism by his answer to the petition of Messrs. Parker and Merriweather, who are contesting the election on the grounds of fraud committed under the Neblitt law. Mr. Wells admits that there were cast in the election 96,276 irregular or illegal votes. As there are only 136,000 registered voters and who cast only 110,000 votes, some of the other St. Louis papers cannot understand how he can have the audacity to claim he was elected at all. Mr. Wells attempts to prove that the illegal votes were cast by adherents of his opponents, but at the election board is composed of two Democrats and one Republican and the majority appoint the election officers. The effort to saddle fraud on the other parties falls rather flat. If there was fraud committed by anybody, however, and there seems to be from Mr. Wells' own admission, the election is vitiated and no one is entitled to office under it.

The majority report of the committee from the Cuban constitutional convention appointed to visit the United States does not recommend the acceptance of the Platt amendment. It offers several amendments to the Platt articles, which are in the nature of a compromise. It is said by prominent Cubans that the real motive behind the rejection of the Platt amendment is to urge the United States to take notice of the deep rooted desire of the people, to be annexed to the United States. A prominent Cuban is quoted in the dispatches as saying: "All the Spaniards in Cuba and the conservative Cubans desire that the Platt amendment should not be accepted, hoping that in such an event the next congress will take a more annexionist view of the relations between the United States and Cuba. Indeed some of our most prominent Spaniards and Cubans have gone as far as to approach Gov. Gen. Wood to tell him that the most conservative and American solution of the present problem would be the rejection of the Platt amendment, and to urge that the United States should take special notice of the situation in order to see what deep root the desire for annexation has taken."

The constitutional convention of Alabama begins today at Montgomery, and will probably be in session about sixty days. Its paramount purpose is to devise the most effective means of eliminating the negro vote, as some of the other states have already done. The one hundred and fifty-five delegates all have their own pet schemes for carrying out the plan, embracing everything from requiring the negro voter to analyze a Greek poem, to giving him "kneek out drops" on election day. But get rid of the vote they intend to do. They will hardly emulate the example of Maryland, however, which passed a law that the opposite effect to what was intended, and resulted in the election of eighteen Republicans out of twenty-four candidates. No one objects to a law that is fair, but no fair law that the Democrats can pass will have the desired effect of giving them a safe majority in places where they do not already have it.

Some of the temperance people never tire of doing foolish things. One of the most ridiculous on record is the threatened boycott of the Carroll county telephone line in Tennessee by the "drys" because men in McKenzie, which is a "dry" town, have been in the habit of ordering whiskey by telephone from Huntington. The telephone company was notified that it would be boycotted if it allowed whiskey ordered over its line, but after considering the matter the directors decided that when people used a telephone and paid for it, they have a right to transact legal business over it, and hence the company cannot interfere. If temperance people would only act with more reason, they would command more respect and have more influence.

The archbishop of Canterbury wants all the clergy of the church of England to marry. He thinks all congregations should pay enough to enable the preacher to marry, if he is not already so, for a minister's family often does as much good as he himself does. Another reason given is that good and able men may be kept from the ministry because of the poor prospects afforded by the profession. The archbishop's arguments doubtless hold equally good in other churches.

The last of the American troops leave Taku Thursday for Manila, ending the United States relief expedition to China. The troops have conducted themselves with courage and dignity, and have been guilty of none of the disgraceful acts that have brought the troops of some of the other nations into disrepute. The people of the United States are justly proud of their soldiers and of the gallant men who lead them.

Yes, Owensboro is having a carnival, judging from the following squib from the Messenger: "A street robin threw a handful of confetti on a farm boy and the affair nearly resulted in the demolition of several of the shows on one side of the Midway."

The many reasons being urged by the Democratic press why Senator Deboe ought not to be sent back to the United States senate is conclusive proof that they are afraid that he will be. As usual they claim a walk over, but their utterances indicate that they have little faith in the old familiar tune they are singing to get 'em up to the monners' bench.

The action of the Hopkins circuit court in enjoining the collection of strike assessments, and forbidding union miners from asking others to strike, as well as prohibiting the collection of union dues or the distribution of fool to strikers, has attracted considerable attention throughout the country. The injunction is temporary and will come up for final hearing at this term of court. The Hopkins circuit miners have repeatedly defied the union organizers, and several attempted strikes have been failures. The final outcome of the injunction is awaited with interest.

A salesman in a local business house was recently washing a show case preparatory to arranging a display. The other clerks were in the rear of the house and very busy when a lady walked in. The salesman who was preparing the display had crawled into the show case and was then resting face up on the inside. The lady walked up and took a seat next to the display case and awaited the liberty of a salesman. The young man in the show case never once doubted that the lady was aware of his presence and, when he had become sufficiently rested, he resumed his work. With his first movement the lady turned, and with loud screams, attempted to leave the store. The fright was too much for her, however, and she could only sink down in a chair and grasp for breath.

She afterward explained that she had not noticed the young man's presence and when he first moved it put her in mind of "the statue coming in life" and for the instant she had become so frightened that she almost fainted.

A very amusing arrest, for all but the victim, was made a few days since. Two cases of dead drunk were found on the levee, soon after the expiration from Joppy had been brought in, and they were taken to the city hall and locked up to await trial. One of the arrests was so drunk that he could not tell his name and when he woke up in the morning the first thing he asked was "where am I?" "You are on a steamboat you don't fool," one of the other inmates of the "jug" replied.

"I was never on a steamboat before this evening in my life but I will be if I tellen this is one."

He yelled himself hoarse and the lookout keeper came down to see what occasioned the trouble and after a volley of drunken questions he asked, "where am I, say?" "Well, you are in jail if you will know, and you might have gotten out all right but we found a small cannon on you and you will now have to stand a fine of $25 and a small ten days in jail," he was informed.

The expression on the face of the yokel, for he was, was something very funny to behold but he took the thing like a man and soon relaxed into sleep.

OUR BENTON LETTER.

Benton, Ky., May 20, 1901. Editor Sun: In a recent issue of the Paducah Sun I had published a letter in which I took occasion to make some remarks upon the results of the late Democratic primary in this county and the part played in same by the Republicans and as that letter together with a few caustic comments drawn by the force of gravitation from the elastic brain of one, Harvey Jones, furnished last week, matter for the larger part of the "Democrat," a small thumb nail issued weekly to the school children by the school superintendent, who is by virtue of his office and grace of the court house ring, a newswriter, editor of same, I thought in order to give him a much needed rest I would write another with permission for the Democrat to publish free gratis. This distinguished journalist, in Marshall county, is well known, so well known that the voters refused to support him for re-election to the office of school superintendent to which he was chosen four years ago when comparatively unknown; since this time, however, his introduction has been rapid indeed and in forming his acquaintance, the people here have become familiar with several traits of the familiar character heretofore supposed to be peculiarly characteristic of an amiable species of quadrupeds distinguished for their strength and melody of voice and like all other animals of their character, it requires some peculiar prompting or excitement to induce him to open up his haying apparatus and make the welkin ring. This has only occurred on two occasions and the innocent cause upon one of them was Max Hanberry. You all know Max, a better fellow never lived, tender hearted as a child and he wouldn't hurt a fellow's feeling for the world. Well, it was this way. Max was billed for a speech at Benton and in the course of his remarks said something about "ring" and Harvey took it all to himself just like he did my little piece and had a fit, and was only prevented from complete release by the power and magic of his own voice, the panegyrics and acrobatic feats in leaping over four benches backwards and forwards on that occasion more worthy the effort of a greater endower than he, but Max was not to blame, he did not know Harvey and when he saw that he had offended "one of these little ones," but to the point, Harvey is mad because of this paragraph, which he reproduces from my letter.

"The Republican party of Marshall county has grown steadily from a small, insignificant but faithful number, to a body of well organized workers that command respect from their opponents. They may not always have the power to elect their man, but they do have the power to defeat any candidate who has rendered himself obnoxious to them, and this power they freely exercised in the late primary, as can be testified to by at least some of the court house 'clunks' who went down to defeat under a storm of ballots cast by Republicans who had been ignored and insulted by that gang."

And under this he gives another letter relative to a "fusion" ticket purporting or rather inferring same to be by the duties of the above written in fact not one word was ever written by me relative to a "fusion" or any other ticket, but Harvey has not been in the newspaper business long enough to distinguish between a letter from a correspondent and a news item, and of course should be excused for getting things mixed in fact if he did not get things tangled in his new profession he would lose his identity of person as school superintendent.

Commenting on the above Mr. Jones says, "If the above letter by Harvey voices the sentiment of the Republicans who voted in the late primary then it must be the gang left who upheld Taylor, the warper, outlaw and fugitive and those who look to Max Hanberry as their guardian star in honor, principle, politics, morality, religion and as a non-falterer in business," and further on he asks, "does the better element of any party endorse such methods as was used to defeat their men and then boast of their unprincipled course as evidenced in the above letter. If a Wa feared the liberal call would be abused, but hope time will prove that all who voted in it were sincere."

Who said they were not sincere, please; find one sentence, or word in my letter that even intimates that a single Republican voted in the primary for a purpose other than a perfectly honorable one; those who voted were as good citizens, as law abiding and possessed of just as much honor as you have claim, much less power, and they voted without hire or pay and you Mr. Jones was so eager to obtain their votes that you were willing to lay aside your pure, immaculate conscience and violate the laws of your country by offering at least one of them $10 for his influence and then with characteristic gall you ask if the "better element" endorse such methods as were used in defeat you, I tell you now it was the "better element" of all parties that did defeat you and they not only proud of their work but received the plaudits of many who were intimidated by you into supporting you. Yes sir, the Republicans who voted against you are the same who voted for and hope to elect W. S. Taylor governor of Kentucky and although he may have made mistakes, they yet endorse and uphold his cause as being more worthy a true Kentuckian who tried to serve his people in an official capacity to which they had elected him in the face of an organized conspiracy to deprive him and the people of that right; rather than the puerile, gambling pretor to whom you bow the knee. No dear Harvey I have too much regard for Max to have placed one of his hills on your door. I understand this was done by one of your faithful standbys during the late unpleasantness, in fact he told me so. He said he thought from the card of congratulations received after your Waterloo that he was a friend of yours and that the sight of his name might recall pleasant memories of your early acquaintance and make you think better of the Republican party. Now honest, Harvey, didn't you do all you could to induce Republicans to go into the primary and vote for you, and didn't you tell them there would be nothing wrong in their voting in the primary or something to that effect. Yes Republicans like hundreds of good Democrats voted against you because they believed Mr. Jones was better qualified and would discharge the duties of the office in a more satisfactory manner than you, they simply exercise their rights and duties as good citizens and because they saw fit to vote against you, you are sore; not only sore but exceedingly wrathful. You see your official record regarding transfers in certain school district and distribution of money appearing to some could not be understood by some of the "gang" who voted against you and there was something said during the campaign about the difference between a check and a receipt, which should have been the same—perhaps Mrs. Dora D— could give some light upon this. There were many other things too numerous to mention that caused voters who had been loyal and true to you before to vote against you, and now my dear Harvey, that "your race is in" tale your medicine graciously and when any one speaks cruelly of the court house "clunks," regard it as a thing of the past and hold your peace. Seek not in your wrath to stir the passion of your fellow man by calling him a "cowardly Indian," for who knows not that the cat is as brave as a lion and game as a lanty and that when you roareth your enemies seeth withen to the mountains of hopelessness. Continue in your mild and light occupation of printing thumbtacks but weary not your brain with questions of state and perhaps you will yet gain strength sufficient to sustain the shock of seeing a one-legged Confederate soldier for a Max Hanberry circular without throwing you into a spin.

TO ENTER ANNAPOLIS

The first young man from Paducah to enter the naval academy at Annapolis will probably be Mr. Overton Brooks, son of Dr. J. G. Brooks, who has just passed the mental examination required before admittance to the academy. The examination was Friday, and Mr. Brooks passed it successfully, which is a credit to him and would be to any other young man, owing to its being so comprehensive and rigid. A telegram was received from him by his father last evening announcing his success and today he will be subjected to a physical examination, which he will doubtless pass as well as he did the others, as he was assistant instructor in the U. S. C. A. gymnasium here, and was one of the best athletes in Paducah. His many friends here will be pleased to learn of his promising career as one of Uncle Sam's cadets. Mr. Brooks has studied hard for the place, and had been in a preparatory school for some time. That he will do credit to himself and his town goes without saying.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH.

THIS IS THE VERDICT IN THE BURRILL JENKINS' CASE.

From Monday's Daily.

Coroner Geo. Phelps this morning at Nance's undertaking establishment held the inquest inquiring into the death of Flagman Burrill Jenkins, who was killed at Haley Saturday morning. The witnesses could not be found yesterday morning, hence the inquest had to be postponed until today.

The verdict of the jury was that he came to his death by accident. Coroner Phelps says that the proper place for the inquest to have been held was where the death occurred. It seems that the body was picked up and brought here by the railroad company without notifying the coroner of Hopkins county, who should have held the inquest.

MR. JENKINS' FUNERAL.

Mr. J. H. Burnett, Miss Sophie Burnett, and Messrs. Chas. Rogers and Henry Green, of the city, went to Wickliffe yesterday to attend the funeral of the late Mr. Burrill Jenkins, of the city, who was killed at Haley Saturday. Each of them declared that they "loved at first sight."

MURDERERS TRIED.

Williamsburg, Ky., May 20.—The trials of the Shotwells were ended this morning. They were tried for the murder of Sutton Warrin in a fatal fight at Corbin last winter, and John Shotwell was convicted and given a life sentence, while Robert Shotwell was cleared. The jury failed to agree as to the guilt or innocence of Charles Shotwell.

PAINFUL INJURIES.

POSTMAN JOHN BAYNHAM FELL FROM A TRAIN BETWEEN HICKORY AND MAYFIELD.

From Monday's Daily. Mr. John Baynham, the well known mail carrier, fell from train No. 121 yesterday afternoon, about 5 o'clock, between Hickory and Mayfield, and was painfully injured. He was found by the track in an unconscious condition at 4:30 and was taken to Mayfield, his original destination. His clothes were torn from his head to his knees and his side and face badly skinned up, and bruised considerably. Mr. Baynham has been a sufferer from rheumatism for the past two weeks and had just recovered sufficiently to be out. He started for Mayfield, his former home, yesterday, and intended to stay out for a short visit. Mr. Baynham arrived in the city early this morning and is not injured except on the left ear, which is badly cut, and a few scratches and bruises on his body. He said that arrangements had been made to stop and let him off the train at a certain point and as they did not stop he attempted to jump off. He narrowly escaped serious injuries.

Sheriff F. P. Fisher, of Carlisle county, has been ordered by the county court at Bardwell to give a new bond within the next ten days. It is reported in the Carlisle county News that Sheriff Fisher is short in his accounts, and a representative of the fidelity and deposit company, of Baltimore, which is on his bond, arrived last week and after an investigation had its attorney make the motion in county court which resulted in the demand for a new bond. The short age, according to the sureties, is $4,137.10, but vouchers and credits will reduce this to $5,000. The amount covers the three years he has been in office.

The next meeting will be held in Crofton, in October, at which time the handsome church now being erected will be dedicated.

CARNIVAL ROMANCE

There couldn't very well be a carnival without a romance or two. One that is worth telling may yet culminate in a happy marriage.

Several months ago a young man employed in one of the largest mercantile establishments in the city wrote his name and address on a tin bucket that was ready for shipment. In the course of time it was sold in Cairo, Ill., and the young lady naturally saw the name, and being of a romantic turn of mind, wrote to the young man.

He replied and they exchanged several letters. She sent her photograph, but the young man soon afterwards lost her address, and had about forgotten the incident.

The other morning during the rush for carnival accommodations, two young ladies applied for board at the same place the young man makes his home. The young man thought there was something familiar about the face of one of them and finally remembered that she was the usage of the photograph of the young woman who had written him. He searched until he found the photograph and taking it down stairs, presented it to her.

She admitted it was her own picture and asked where he got it, and when he explained, she was very much surprised to learn that he was the same young man she had written to. The acquaintance was renewed, and during the carnival week perhaps developed a feeling more tender than friendship.

The young lady has now returned home, but it is hinted that she may also return to Paducah to live.

NEW STAMPS.

THERE ARE FEW CALLS FOR THEM AT THE LOCAL POSTOFFICE.

The supply of Pan American souvenir postage stamps on sale at the post-office here has not yet been exhausted, and there are few calls for them. As they are not given out unless called for, and few people seem to know that they are to be had, it is uncertain when they will attain any degree of popularity. The stamps, however, are extremely artistic, and a set of them is well worth having as a souvenir.

The one-cent stamp is a green ground handsomely engraved, with a lake steamer in the center; the two-cent is red, with the picture of a fast express train in black; the four-cent stamp is light brown with the picture of an automobile; the five-cent stamp is blue with a picture of a suspension bridge at Niagara; the eight-cent stamp is dark brown, showing the picture of a canal with canal boats, and the ten-cent stamp is a terra cotta, with the picture of an ocean liner. The collection is a very pretty one, furnishing as it does representations of various modes of travel.

The borders take up the colors of the regular series of the same denomination now in use. The words "Commemorative series, 1901" and "United States of America" nest below appear above the vignette; the legend in a line next below the central opening, with the denomination in a line at the bottom appears in the same order on all stamps of the series. All the lettering is in white Roman capitals. All the central illustrations are from photographs.

A MEXICAN HOLD-UP.

BY OLD PADUKE.

Author of "The Liars' Duel," "Farleigh," "Should She Explain."

The stage from Trevino on the Mexican International R. R. to Monterey, on the Mexican National R. R., started for Monterey at 1 p. m. It was now 10 o'clock a. m. and the down train had just arrived at Trevino. The passengers who got off to take the stage route were a boy tourist and four German merchants. The day before the guard had given up his task and for the first time for weeks the stage was without protection. It was no use, as long as a guard rode with the coach no Domingues appeared. Trap them they could not, and fight them they would not, so the stage company gave notice that if a load of passengers could not protect themselves from two men then they would have to submit, as the company had done all they could be expected to do. It was stated that no more guards would make the trip except to protect valuable express matter.

"This was the first time out and each one took his own risk. When this was known the passengers had a talk and concluded to ride, as the next train was 12 hours off and the stage short cut saved several hundred miles by rail to those who wanted to get back to the States."

They would be due at Monterey at 6 p. m. and the north bound train left an hour later. After it was decided to run the gauntlet there was an examining of weapons. Among the travelers were produced three revolvers, and the boy had a 22 pearl-handled toy that he carried in his upper vest pocket. The rest of his outfit consisted of a roll of clothing in a blanket and a leather fishing rod case, with jointed rod, flies, lines, etc. At the other end he raised a little flap and pulled out some paper-backed novels. His entire unconsciousness of impending danger made the rest of the party feel sorry for him. His chummy white lace, little dear of a mustache, light fringe of soft curls under a pith helmet, and calm, unconcerned grey eyes bespoke the Mama's boy out seeing the world before going into business. The driver spoke up and voicing the sentiments of the crowd advised him not to go.

"Why not?" the boy asked meekly.

"Well, I just see you in the hands of them Domingues. I guess they would eat you for their supper," replied the driver, with a wink at the other four travelers.

"Oh, I reckon not; not as long as I have this," and he patted the little 22-caliber.

"Oh, Wow! Did you hear that?" snapped the manipulator of the reins. "Let me tell you something, sonny. Now if you was to shoot me with that thing and I found it out I might slap you, see?" and he laughed uproariously at his own silliness.

"No, I don't see," replied the artless one. "I believe I'll try if I can buy any curios in this town to take home to mother," and he marched off down the street with a manly swing.

"Well, gentlemen, what do you think of that?" demanded the Jehu, "and his ticket calls for a seat by the driver. If he falls off I can't help it, as I can't drive four horses and take care of a child at the same time."

In about an hour the boy came back to the office with his arms full of packages which he laid on the ground before the travelers. Then he got out his fishing combination, pulled out the sections of the rod, jointed them again and made imaginary casts. Then packed up everything, scratched himself, got up, sat down, asked questions, wanted to start on the trip right away and made himself a general nuisance. The contempt of the driver was still concealed, but at last the time arrived, the horses hitched, the last instruction given, and the youth climbed up beside the driver with his case. A crack of the whip and they were off on the cross-country ride to Monterey, a long, dusty, up and down road with its beggars, naked children, mud houses, cactus and grassy plains for scenery. When the journey was well under way the boy opened up with "Say, driver—"

"Don't call me driver, my name's Waddell, Sam Waddell."

"Now, Mr. Waddell, just Waddell."

"Well, 'Waddell,' I heard a man at the office say that if he was the driver he would not take that duff along unless he pulled a 'red order' on him. 'What's a red order?'

"The man was about right. A red order from the company reads like this: 'Obey the bearer or lose your job.'"

"Isn't a ticket the same thing?'"

"Now, it ain't the same thing."

"After a half hour or more of silence the boy broke out again with 'Say Waddell, that's an awful hard town, that Trevino.'"

"Why?" replied Sam curtly.

"Because when I bought them things I went all over the town trying to get a $50 bill changed, and I had to give up buying because no one could change it."

"You don't mean to tell me, you double dam fool! That $50 bill will bring them Domingues down on us sure. So you've got money, have you, and you showed it to them Gressers? Le Moses? I am almost a mind to put you down ten miles from Monterey and make you foot it, that is, if we ain't stopped."

Sam mused awhile and made grimaces of disgust, then he resumed: "That settles it, don't say another word to me or I will love my temper and slap you off this seat, and you will be run over and you won't see your Ma any more. Well, I'll be damned!"

Another silence followed, then the youth thought he would like to take a shot at a rabbit and announced his intention. He felt in his pocket for his 22, it was gone!

"Picked your pocket and stole your gun; boys ought not to have guns any way," put in the irritated Waddell.

The boy seemed crushed by this misfortune and the avalanche of contumely heaped upon him, and spoke no more but amused himself looking about the country with his field glass. Shortly after changing horses at the half way house and when well under way, he became deeply interested and fixed his glass persistently in one direction. The driver's curiosity was too much for him.

"What do you see?" he condescended to ask.

"Oh, I can talk, can I? Well, it seems to be a circus or something, two men 'loping across the plain aiming just ahead. Both have blue cloaks on, high hats and knee breeches, and the tails and manes of their horses are tied full of different colored ribbons."

"Domingues? I just know some of their apes saw your money and they have been warned that a good thing is coming. I'll bet signals have been flying from every high point on the route all the afternoon." He pulled his horses up to a walk and called down to the drummers.

"Domingues just ahead! Get out your guns. It's four against two I don't count the boy. Now show your hand. As for me, they don't want anything I've got and I am not going to get hurt. I can help it, and I give you last warning."

He sat up suddenly and began to drive. "I'll save one thing for them Dons, you can agree with me that they give a fellow a show for his money with all those clothes and ribbons," continued Sam with a grim smile at his untimely joke.

"Where do you think they will stop us?" the boy questioned.

"You don't seem to be scared much."

"Me? Not! This is fun and an experience I can tell about when I grow up. Where will they stop us?"

"About a mile ahead, as we run down this long slope and go up the next one. The horses will about be in a walk and then they will have you, and I am glad of it. Fun is it?"

When half way down the long slope the youngster lunched in his pocket, pulled out a piece of paper and touched the driver.

"You know what this is?" he asked calmly.

"Dain if it ain't a red order!" exclaimed Sam in blank astonishment.

"Well, I'm McDonald the Wells-Fargo messenger," he went on quietly, "got up for these fellows here. We have got 'em dead to rights. That money showing did the trick, they are here and it is my business to wing 'em both."

"Why didn't you tell me long ago?" said Waddell with a hurt expression.

"Because I don't take chances with anybody in my plans. How do I know you are not in with them? Your stage has been robbed more than any other two in this section, so don't do anything suspicious for there are guns sticking out all over me and eyes in the back of my head. Your talk to those lopsie shows why it is so easy to stop you."

"After giving this little lecture he resumed: 'And now you do exactly what I tell you, understand!'

"That I will, you are a good one." Then in an undertone, "Poked me, amant Sam Waddell, and I poked him at him and joshed him. Sam, you are a two-spot," with much disgust to himself.

"What's the drummers doing?" says Waddell, after catching his breath.

"They are all lying fat on the floor of the stage; they are so white I expect they are as dead; they can't be used to riding over rough roads."

"Aint you going to make them help you?"

"No, I want them to stay just where they are."

"Where's your gun?"

"Right here in this yellow case. It is a double-barreled, sawed-off shotgun, loaded with buckshot. Pulling them fishing rods in and out of the barrels was only a blind for you, old man."

"What do you want me to do? I am starting up the slope directly."

"Drive your horses in a walk up the grade. When you get near the top start them in a gallop, and as you go over drive them for all they are worth. The Dons will call to you to stop, but make out you can't hold your horses and keep them going. I'll tend to the rest."

"All right," said Waddell, settling himself and taking a fresh grip on the reins.

Down grade easy, up in a walk, then the whip and over the crest in a run. On each side of the road was a picturesque Domingues. Each held a repeating rifle—one leveled at the driver's seat, the other on the empty stage windows.

"Stop! Halt!" commanded the spokesman.

"Can't hold 'em," he shouted. In answer to Sam's halloo the horses rushed forward.

"Stop, I tell you," yelled the Mexicans, as they raced beside the coach.

"Can't hold 'em, I told you."

All this time the youth clutched his yellow case across his knees, a picture of abject terror. The desperadoes smiled. This hold up was easy, no trouble from the boy, Sam with his hands full and the inside passengers out of sight.

"If you don't stop 'em we are going to throw the leader, called out the elder Dom to the driver."

Sam made no reply, but apparently labored in vain to control his horses.

"Throw the leader, Francisco," came the order.

Francisco sped forward, unbound his lariar and swung the long loop around his head ere he threw to catch the feet of the foremost plunging horse. The elder brother took his eyes off the boy and driver momentarily and the lance was over. Quick and as unexpected as lightning from a clear sky, the yellow case went up—a flash and report, then the right harrel was turned across the now terrified horses backs and Francisco stopped, his hand riddled with buckshot.

McDonald threw out the empty shells, slipped in loaded ones and was ready, but it was not necessary.

Back in the road was the elder Domingues, dragging himself into the bushes, while his horse, full of shot, and with pain, squealing, kicking and buckjumping across the country, his ribbons flying lustily, his highly decorated saddle upside down.

In front was Francisco, rocking in his saddle, his horse jumping from side to side, till, with a plunge, he threw his rider heavily and started across the plain to join his companion in bedribbled revelry.

"Shall we go back and get those two fellows, Mr. McDonald?" asked Sam, demurely.

"No, they will be sick a long time at ter this. It's my business to get back to the States before the news of this gets out. Then looking toward the still rearing stage horses, "I am mighty sorry I put some shot in the ears of those leaders. You won't have to use the whip any more."

"No, I don't believe I can hold them this time for sure," grinned Sam.

McDonald looked down into the stage through the peep-hole. The traveling

FLAGMAN KILLED

Mr. T. Buhle Jenkins, a Well Known Young Man, Meets Death.

(From Saturday's Daily.)

Mr. T. Buhle Jenkins, a flagman on the Illinois Central and a resident of this city, was killed at Hiley, a station just this side of Central City, at 12:55 this morning while attempting to get into the front end of the caboose of extra train No. 23, north bound.

There were no witnesses to the accident, but it is thought that he met his death in trying to board his train. When the train had been side tracked and the main line cleared it was discovered that Mr. Jenkins was missing and Conductor Plink then went in search for the missing flagman and found his dead body some distance from the track at the above mentioned station. He was badly mangled, his right hand and left leg having been cut off and his head crushed.

The deceased had been on the Illinois Central only about six weeks and had never drawn his pay since employed on this division. He at one time worked on the northern division as a fireman, but since his residence in Paducah, had been employed as a clerk in the Ellis, Hardy & Phillips dry goods department, until he went out as flagman. He left Paducah at 8 o'clock last night.

He was born in Highlandville and was 23 years of age. He leaves besides a stepfather, Iml Reeves, and mother, of Wickliffe, two sisters, Mrs. Dr. Ed Shelton and Mrs. Pearl Perkins, both of Highlandville, and a brother, Mr. Will Jenkins, of Highlandville. Mrs. Hugh Perkins is in the city now at the home of her uncle, Mr. J. H. Barnett, 313 North Fifth street, at whose home the deceased made his home. The deceased had been in the city three years and in that time had made numerous friends who were deeply grieved to learn of his death. The body was brought to this city this morning at 4 o'clock and taken to the M. Nace undertaking establishment.
